Why are beneficiaries important?

- Naming a beneficiary or beneficiaries is critical to assure that proceeds from your group life insurance coverage are distributed according to your wishes. Recipients can be individuals, an organization, a trust, or your estate.
- The primary beneficiary will be the recipient of your group life insurance proceeds in the event of your death.
- Contingent beneficiaries are important because, if the primary beneficiary predeceases you, the proceeds of your group life insurance coverage are distributed among this second group.
